Art Unit: 2655

The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jp 11-306661 in view of Tosaki et al (6606290).

Claims 1 and 4 merely read on turning the system off if the disk is not authorized (authentic) by reading the copy management information. The limitation "computer data" merely read on any data on the disk representative of ones and zeros or any data that is a ROM data that can not be altered (DVD-ROM or CD). The limitation of reading the copy management information also read on identifying the disk type such as DVD-ROM (copy pretected) or not (DVD-RAM). In general the examiner interprets the claims as reading the copy management data from the disk to determine the disk type (DVD-ROM/DVD-RAM) in order to control the disk rotation. The primary reference discloses the use of an optical disk apparatus having an optical head for reading the disk type determined by the unit 20 in order to control the disk rotational speed as shown in figs 2 and 3. Although the reference discloses the disk type identification using the ISO9660 or the UDF, the reference does not explicitly disclose the use of reading copy management to determine whether the disk is protected or not (disk type). The secondary reference discloses the use of a disk copy management data on the disk to determined whether the disk is protected or not as show by elements 3 and 15 for the purpose of protecting the disk data copyright as stated in column 10 lines 1-21. In thus it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to use the copy right management data which identifies the disk type (as stated in page 9 lines 1-5 of the specification) in order to protect data on the disk from being pirated. Such modification is called for in the primary reference for the purpose of protecting data on the disk.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Jp 2000-149415.
